2004 AIRUM Conference Registration Issue

Happy October!

We hope that your academic year has gotten off to a good start and that our annual fall conference is on your calendar! If not, please reserve November 11 and 12, 2004 for this terrific networking and professional development opportunity.

Once again, the steering committee has assembled a very interesting and diverse conference agenda; one that will appeal to those new to institutional research and old-timers alike. The Hotel Sofitel, a four star hotel, has been selected as our conference venue—both for its Bloomington location and its reputation for providing excellent food, great customer service and its elegant and comfortable French-style accommodations.

Because so many of you said that you welcomed the opportunity to network at our fall gathering, the steering committee decided not to plan a Thursday evening event this year. Instead we have arranged to have a cash bar and snacks available at the conclusion of Thursday's conference activities and will provide assistance during the conference to help you arrange your Thursday evening plans. Shuttles will be running between the hotel and Mall of America as well as other popular Bloomington destinations.

There is a bit of road construction underway on the interstate by the hotel, but do not be alarmed! Simply follow the driving directions available from the hotel's web site and you will have no trouble at all.

We look forward to seeing you at the conference!

Sincerely,

Mary Soroko, Steering Committee Chair

This is what one of last year's winners had to say. . .

This last academic year was the beginning of my appointment as the Chair of our college's Institutional Assessment Committee. Although I took up that position with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm (even relief, it must be admitted, since I was leaving behind a spot on our Catalog Committee), this was my first formal involvement on our college's research team. When our Vice-President for Administration suggested that I consider attending the AIRUM conference—and I took a look at the agenda—I saw it as an opportunity to benefit from the experience of those who have developed significant expertise in this area.

I was not disappointed. I decided to participate in several concurrent sessions that dealt with strategic and academic planning, and without exception I took away useful ideas from each of them. I also attended the two sessions by Kevin Casey on developing and implementing an organizational assessment program, and they built nicely on the keynote address that he gave earlier that day. The timing was fortunate, as our college is right now in that process of development and implementation.

If you're like me, the thought may cross your mind now and then that you've been to enough conferences to last for a while. That thought never arose at this conference, however. The level of engagement by the participants was noteworthy, and I appreciated being able to benefit from the lively interaction. And besides, the food was good and the entertainment entertaining; will the Steering Committee be able to find a worthy successor to Eddie's Bar and Grill?!

Our college had been forced to reduce our staff by 12 percent and our budget by 20 percent for the 2003-2004 school year, which resulted in the unfortunate situation of no budgetary funding for our committee for that year. Without a scholarship, I would have been unable to participate in the 2003 conference. Thank you for making it possible for me to attend. I look forward to seeing many of you again this November.

Presentations Planned

See the AIRUM website for a more complete description of the following sessions.

Luncheon Speakers

- Strategic Planning—followed by 45-minute panel discussion
Michael Dolence
President of Michael G. Dolence and Associates
- IR Role in New Campus Initiatives
Dana Offerman, Capella University
Vice Provost for Assessment and Institutional Research

Dr. Offerman will explain both the challenges and the opportunities of establishing an institutional research function in an online, for-profit, privately-held university. For example, challenges include benchmarking within an environment that guards proprietary information. At the same time, considerable opportunities exist for research and assessment in online learning. She will explain some of Capella's primary initiatives in institutional research, and how institutional research informs planning and decision making in this for-profit environment.
